

Make Your Own Wand adapted from <http://bit.ly/2fi9DqF>

- 8 ½ x 11 paper
- Glue stick or double sided tape
- Glue gun
- Tissue paper
- Paint

Smear glue stick diagonally across the paper. Roll the paper starting in the corner and roll diagonally, rolling one end very slightly less than the other so the roll will be tapered. Roll until you get the glue then smear more glue in the free corner and continue to roll the wand tightly and hold until glue is set. Trim the ends so they are straight. Add a small wad of tissue paper to the end with the larger opening. Carefully dribble the glue gun glue into both ends of the wand. To add more detail you can continue to dribble the glue gun glue down the side--rotating the wand slowly to cover both sides. Once the hot glue is dry you can add color to your wand--we layered a few different colors of acrylic paint for a distressed look.

Magnetic Slime adapted from <http://bit.ly/2fww4vc>

- 6 oz white school glue
- 1/4 cup water
- 1/4 cup liquid starch
- 2-4 tsp black Iron Oxide powder
- Neodymium Magnet

Add the school glue to a bowl and stir in the water. Once it's fully incorporated, add the liquid starch and stir until it starts to come together.

Remove the slime from the bowl and knead it, stretching it to make it more pliable. At this point, you have a bunch of white slime.

Make a small indentation in the slime and add a teaspoon of Iron Oxide powder. Fold the slime over the powder and knead it to incorporate the powder throughout. The slime will turn black. Repeat the process to add enough powder that the slime reacts to a neodymium magnet.
